READ THE FOLLOWING EXTRACT AND ANSWER ALL THE QUESTIONS THAT FOLLOW.

On the first Sunday in November 1987 people gathered in Enniskillen, Northern Ireland, to remember those killed in past wars. As people gathered at the war memorial a bomb exploded showering the area with debris. Gordon Wilson and his 20 year old daughter Marie, a student nurse, were buried several feet under the rubble.

In the dark and chaos, father and daughter just managed to reach out and hold hands. Gordon asked his daughter “Are you all right Marie?” Marie squeezed her father’s hand saying “Daddy I love you very much.” These were her last words. The bomb killed eleven people including Marie, who later died in hospital. Gordon Wilson, her heart-broken father, was injured in the explosion but amazed reporters who interviewed him that evening when he said “I bear no ill will I bear no grudge” towards the bombers as it is “not going to bring her back to life.” He said that because his daughter’s last words were words of love, he would pray for the people responsible for the bombing and be thankful for the strength of God’s never-ending love. Throughout the rest of his life Gordon Wilson was often called upon to speak about this experience. Through the meetings he attended, the interviews he gave and his writing, Gordon Wilson worked hard to bring about peace and overcome bitterness between people.
